Additionally youcan use the PT1280 to save and print your three favorite labels in secondswith just a touch of the keys.The PT1280 uses narrow 3.5millimeter blackonwhite nonlaminated tapefor labeling CD spines.Versatile Tape Handling for a Wide Range of Applications The PT1280 is flexible when it comes to tape sizes and types. The PT1280 offers three different text sizes for added versatility, and it will automatically adjust the text size according to the size of the tape. Make labels with up to two lines of text. It also features five textframing options available for even more flexibility. No matter what kind of tape is used, the PT1280s 180 dpi print resolution allows for quick, accurate printouts. Print labels at brisk speeds of up to 10 millimeters per second. Compact Size and Ergonomic Design Take the PT1280 Labeler anywhere at only 6.28 x 5.94 x 2.36 inches and 1.04 pounds, its compact enough for effortless portability. The PT1280 features a full QWERTY keyboard with raised, angled keys for easier typing.<http://www.alexandrapanayotou.com/web/images/static/dacor-cm24t-manual.xml>

The easyview 15 character LCD display is large enough for easy onscreen reading and editing, and it allows for quicker style changes, such as outline, bold, shadow, italic, vertical, and more. Printing your favorite labels has never been faster or easier. It is backed by a oneyear limited warranty. Vince 3.0 out of 5 stars There are many different ways to print labels. Sizes, fonts, direction etc. My complaints are that it will take awhile to learn how to use this product. Trying to figure out size, length, width, for every different kind of application is an exercise in trial and error. When trying to cut the label, the way it is positioned, your thumb hits the print button again. I have gotten better at this, but occasionally I print an unwanted label. I would recommend this product, but make sure you buy a label cartridge at the same time. The starter cartridge does not last that long. I have used it while doing my decorating to label the branches of my artificial tree, the old labels were falling off. I have also used them to mark small bins that I use in my home office. I did not get the plug in power supply for this because I only use this every now and then for projects. I rewired my fathers audio receiver since the family dog continually knocked loose the speaker wires and he would spend an hour figuring out where the wires went back. Not anymore. Used this for labeling tool locations in the garage, speaker wires, network cables and video cables. Keep in mind that this is a basic labeler. You wont get loads of fancy fonts or all the bells and whistles. But for basic use, this thing is really useful.

Now, if you have neat handwriting, smudgeproof labels and a ultrafine Sharpie, then you might not need this. If you have the handwriting of a PhD writing you a prescription, look into this handy gadget. You can set it so it doesnt waste much tape at the end of the label. I bought an extra roll of tape when I got mine since the price of tape is much cheaper on Amazon than at Office Depot. But I am still using the tape that came with it. I would say this is a really good label maker if you are only doing the occasional label. When you tried to print a label, you could hear the motor running, but nothing ever happened. I disassembled the unit, and found that a gear was maladjusted; I tightened it up, and the labelmaker works great. All in all, worth the experience, but only if youre a do it yourselfer. Otherwise, this is a great labelmaker. I probably would not get this for business use or for high volume use. Positives Relatively easy to use, has different preset label lengths I use the one for file folders the most, saves your last label. Negatives Can waste some label when printing certain types of labels, does not come with an AC adapter, but for the way I use it an adapter would just get in the way makes it non portable and the batteries seem to last a long time. I label everything now and couldn't live without it. To see which labeling tapes and accessories are available for your model simply click on the model number in the left hand column. Like, do you have a lot of AC power adapters and get them confused. No more; they are all labeled. Charging times for certain devices are now labeled. Bunch of wires under the desk. Now they have labels. Once I got used to the text sizing versus label length, I found the PT1280 to be everything I expected. Brother PT1280 Printer Review Expert review of the Brother PT1280 printer Our Verdict The Brother PT1280 portable labeller is a reasonably priced and featurepacked label printer designed for the home and office. It can print up to 12mm wide laminated labels and its easy to use with a fairly large display screen and a neat keyboard, but the Brother PTouch PT1280 printer lacks a more reliable power source and it has only one font. Design. The PTouch PT1280 handheld label machine comes with a builtin cutter. Users may save up to three commonly used labels. The Brother PT1280 PTouch labeller can print on narrow tapes for CD spines. It has five framing options and six auto formats, and the text size is automatically adjusted according to the width of the tape.

The handheld design is ergonomic and simple to use. It supports standard laminated, acidfree, nonlaminated ironon fabrics, flexible ID and extra strength adhesive labels. The Brother PTouch 1280 label printer can only print in Helsinki font. Users need to purchase six AAA batteries or an optional adapter for it. The PT1280 labeller uses thermal transfer technology so text may fade when exposed to harsh conditions.
