On August 2, 1968, while assigned to the U. S. Naval Station at San Diego, California, plaintiff, upon his plea of guilty, was convicted by the Municipal Court of said city of willfully and unlawfully taking another's personal property. I understand that an undesirable discharge is under other than honorable conditions and may deprive me of virtually all veterans benefits based on my current period of active service, and that I may expect to encounter substantial prejudice in civilian life in situations wherein in the type of service rendered in any branch of the Armed Forces or the character of discharge may have a bearing. I understand that I may request or waive the privileges listed below. On November 18, 1968, the Chief of Naval Personnel, after consideration of the case, directed the separation of plaintiff with an undesirable discharge by authority of Article C10312, BUPERS Manual, by reason of his civilian conviction.

Plaintiff was discharged in the manner so prescribed on December 13, 1968. He alleges that he was under the impression that he was to receive a medical discharge. Plaintiff seeks the Court's declaration that this is so, and prays that the Court issue an injunction directing defendant to change his discharge to a general discharge under honorable conditions. In other words, the Court may not substitute its judgment for that of the administrative officers, but may only review the record to insure that the pertinent laws and regulations were followed. Reed v. Franke, supra; Sanford v. United States, supra; Courtney v. Secretary of Air Force, 267 F. Supp. 305 C.D. Cal. 1967; Merson v. United States, 173 Ct. Cl. 92 1965. The BCNR may deny an application where a sufficient basis for review has not been established. He admits that he was counseled concerning the types of discharges and the consequences of signing the waiver, but complains that because the counseling was not individual, his waiver was unknowing. Plaintiff's claim is frivolous. To allay all doubt on this matter, defendant has filed an affidavit executed by the former legal officer who counseled plaintiff prior to his execution of the waiver, and who witnessed his signature thereon. Although the former officer does not recall plaintiff's individual case, his affidavit does make it plain that in all cases such as plaintiff's, he took pains to ensure that persons being considered for administrative discharges were properly counseled and advised. In any event, plaintiff is asking the Court to make a factual determination as to his state of mind, and this in effect would have the Court reweigh the evidence presented to the BCNR for the purpose of determining its credibility. As we have pointed out earlier, to do so would be to ask the Court to exceed the limited scope of review which applies to matters of this character.

His assertion that he was eliminated from the service as a punishment for alleged manifestations of emotional and psychiatric conditions is unfounded. However, such a recommendation is exactly that advisory only and not binding upon the command. Plaintiff seeks to avoid the effects of this decision by complaining that he did not receive a hearing before the BCNR, and that it did not issue findings of fact or an opinion setting forth reasons for its adverse decision. See also Courtney v. Secretary of Air Force, 267 F. Supp. 305, 311 C.D. Cal. 1967. As no such requirement exists in plaintiff's case, the Board's failure to make findings was not error. Conclusion An appropriate order will be entered. Because of his knowing waiver of such an opportunity, he cannot be heard to complain now. On the DD214 near the bottom there is a discharge code.
